Between noon and 5 p.m. on 26 August 1953, exercises by Soviet army troops with the cooperation of the air force were held west of Beeskow. Repeatedly, aircraft with a white inscription on the fuselage and a red marking on the rudder assembly made dives at the practice area. Between the individual dives, the aircraft flew curves at a distance from the field. Gunfire was heard from the practice area. Between 2 p.m. and 3 p.m. on 28 August, source observed that a twin-engine aircraft towed a sleeve target which was fired at by other propeller-driven aircraft.<sup>2</sup>
